FIRST JOINT DISCUSSION

Between Messrs. Allensworth
And Smith at the Court House Yesterday.

A large crowd heard the opening speeches between Jas. B. Allensworth and Denny P. Smith, candidates for the Democratic nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney, yesterday afternoon. The court house was comfortably filled and John Stites presided over the meeting.

Mr. Allensworth spoke first and his speech occupied about one hour. Mr. Smith followed and Mr. Allensworth was given a brief rejoinder. The discussion was pitched upon a courteous plane and both speakers presented their claims with earnestness and eloquence.

THE PLAIN TRUTH OF IT

(Louisville Times.)

Says the Bardwell News:

"The Democratic party must have a state platform upon which to place its nominees—some declaration of principles to submit to the people for their approval. This year a platform is needed worse than it ever was, but we fear that politics is going to exert a greater influence in the matter than common sense and fairness, and that our nominees will be placed in an exceedingly embarrassing condition unless a state convention is held prior to the primary and a platform adopted. There has been brought into the present campaign the question of statewide prohibition. It is stated as a fact that one or more candidates for governor are opposed to state-wide prohibition, while one or more of the candidates favor it. Everybody agrees that a state convention must be held either before or after the primary. Suppose we wait until after the primary and a state-wide prohibition advocate has been selected the Democratic nominee for governor and the state convention should refuse to adopt a state-wide plank in the platform. Or, worse still, suppose the state convention should adopt a state-wide prohibition platform and the nominee for governor should be opposed to it. There is but one way to avert such a calamity and that is to hold a state convention first, adopt a platform and give it to the Democrats of the state, and to the candidates, for their guidance. Any other course is either cowardly or influenced by political motives, and either case will bring disaster."

It might well be wished, for the solidarity of the party and the sake of the commonwealth that the question of state-wide prohibition could be left out of the coming campaign. That wish is now idle. Two of the candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor have made it an issue, so far as their personal political fortunes are concerned. The nomination of either of them means that one party is committed to state-wide, not as a matter of principle, but of expediency. A prohibitionist on any other than a prohibition platform would be as certain of defeat as was Wat Hardin, who declared for free silver after being nominated on a gold platform. A like fate would be in store for the Democratic nominee who had declared personally for the county unit law and was forced to accept a platform of which the maintenance of the county unit law did not constitute a plank.

In either state of the case the Democratic party would be in the position of making whatever principles it has subservient to the political

"ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA"

The marvelous love story of "Antony and Cleopatra," as told in the George Kleine production of the Cines photo drama is so divinely human in its portrayal that it cannot help but make an immediate hit with the public, according to the statements of all who have witnessed it.

Although the characters are notables of ancient history, they are so naturally acted and the scenes so consistently and artistically arranged, the spectators are carried away by their realism and can almost imagine the great human drama forms a part of their daily lives. It seems only natural that the handsome Roman soldier-orator, Marc Antony, should fall a victim to the charms and wiles of the beautiful Egyptian Queen, Cleopatra. Her magnetism, her wonderful mentality and queenly self-possession are most admirably portrayed by the delightful actress Signora Terilli Gonzales who is a personal realization of all ideals of Egypt's Queen and a player of remarkable genius, as well as a mistress of the art of expression. Antony Novelli, who won millions of friends here as Vinius in "Quo Vadis" is equally happily suited to the role of Marc Antony. Numerous other favorites of "Quo Vadis" fame are to be found in the "Antony and Cleopatra" picture and all acquit themselves with the same artistic thoroughness and ability that characterized their first introduction to us. As for the pictorial and scenic beauties of the production, they are hardly sufficient words to do them justice. They are, without exception, the most gorgeous and impressive group that have ever been caught by the camera. "Antony and Cleopatra" will undoubtedly make another fortune for George Kleine, and set a new standard for the art of motion photography. The engagement in this city commences tomorrow at the Rex Theatre.

cal necessities of its candidate for governor.

The people of Kentucky are not going to turn over the administration of the state's affairs to such a party.

If the Democratic party, as a party, is for state-wide prohibition, well and good. It is for the county unit law, well and good. It must, however, be for one or the other as a matter of party conviction, not as a self-confessed political shyster, if it is to have any standing in the court of public opinion on election day.

There are now six Democratic candidates for the gubernatorial nomination. The following of no one of them represents more than a fourth of the party strength. Up to now the will of the majority has governed in the making of the party platform. If the primary is held before the convention the will of the minority will govern or the candidate must be repudiated.

Without a platform that represents the will of the party the most unfortunate of the six candidates for the Democratic nomination for governor will be the candidate that gets—and that regardless of the fact of whether he has personally de-

First Trial.

The "twilight sleep" was given its first trial by Dr. J. T. Altman at Vanderbilt Hospital. The woman patient felt no ill effects, according to Dr. Altman, who sees many advantages over the usual method in maternity cases.

The German submarines sank a trawler and three little fishing vessels Friday in the absence of battleships to torpedo. This is getting to be like the city sportsman who goes out with guns and dogs to hunt quail and after a hard day in the fields returns with a rabbit, a songbird and a woodpecker.

Russians found that Turks had massacred 720 Christians in one Persian town they occupied. In the city of Urumiah 800 are said to have been killed and 2,000 have died of disease. The holy war threatens a general massacre of 10,000 or more of Christians.

Gen. Russky, of the Russian army on the north, is sick and Gen. Alexiev has been appointed to succeed him.
